* Pairing is a practice whereby the party Whips arrange for two Members from opposite sides to agree that they will abstain from voting on a particular occasion to permit one or both to be present in the House. In this way, their votes are effectively neutralized and the relative strength of the parties in the House maintains its balance.

The Standing Orders are silent on the question of a broken pair, which occurs when a paired Member votes. Still, agreements to pair are private arrangements between Members and not matters on which the Speaker or the House can intervene.
